

Aaron Raphael, Esq.

I am a partner at J.A. Lindeman & Co. PLLC, an intellectual property law firm in Falls Church, VA. I have nearly 20 years of patent law experience, focusing my practice on counseling U.S. and foreign clients in patent procurement, due diligence investigations, and preparing patentability, validity, and infringement opinions with emphasis on chemical, pharmaceutical, cosmetic, and medical diagnostic technologies.

My broad patent law experience includes strategic patent portfolio development, securing patent rights through the appellate process, and patent litigation. My litigation experience included serving on litigation teams for numerous Hatch-Waxman litigations involving Abbreviated New Drug Applications, including paroxetine HCl (Paxil®), gemcitabine HCl (Gemzar®), and carbidopa/levodopa/entacapone (Stalevo®), and litigations involving etanercept (Enbrel®), the TRUTrack® blood glucose meter, and metathesis catalysts (Grubbs Second Generation Catalyst). I have extensive experience in all aspects of pre-trial, trial, and post-trial proceedings.

Prior to joining J.A. Lindeman, I was a patent attorney with the law firm of Finnegan LLP in Washington, DC for nearly 10 years. I also practiced patent law at O'Brien Jones PLLC, a patent law firm boutique located in McLean, VA.

I obtained a BS in Chemistry from the University of Michigan in 1996 and a JD from Emory University in 1999.

Joshua E. Ney, Ph.D.

I am an associate in the Ann Arbor office of the intellectual property law firm of Brinks Gilson & Lione. My practice focuses on patent litigation and prosecution in the pharmaceutical, biotechnology, and chemical industries. I represent pharmaceutical clients in patent litigation and prosecution matters involving new chemical entities, second medical uses, pharmaceutical formulations, synthetic processes, and pharmaceutical polymorphs.

Prior to joining Brinks, I received a B.A. in chemistry from Dartmouth College in 2002, a Ph.D. in chemistry from the University of Michigan in 2007, and a J.D. from Michigan Law School in 2009.
